The code for the back of the lanyard badge

This one code is how a delegate gets into the session. It opens an agent on their own phone in about twenty seconds. The artwork on the left is the file that was sent on 10 September, at the size it prints on the small badge. Nothing on this sheet is decorative.

34.56 mm square on the 85 by 54 badge, 40 mm on the 100 by 70, at 100 percent size	34.56 mm on the 85 by 54 badge, 40 mm on the 100 by 70. Never under 22 mm, and never stretched.

quiet zone	already inside the artwork, four modules. The card leaves 7.39 mm and 8.90 mm of clear space; keep at least 4 mm.
colour	as supplied: a navy #0B3251 to crimson #9E2A32 gradient on cream. Never inverted, never a flat tint, never on a dark panel.
the centre	WERC APAC's own wordmark, cleared out of the code. It is part of the drawing and the code still reads with it.
correction	level H, 41 modules. Do not re make it from the address.
file	the vector beside this sheet, badge-qr.svg, which is the file sent on 10 September. Place it, do not redraw it.

The same address on the screen and on the table tents.

five rules, and one test

1. Place the supplied vector. A code re made from the address is a different code, and this one is the one that was tested.
2. Do not put the holder's plastic seam, a fold or a punch hole across it, and keep it off the very edge.
3. Do not print it on a dark or metallic panel. Some Android cameras refuse a light code on a dark ground, and a room of a hundred and forty phones is not the place to find out which.
4. The card is cream to its own edge and nothing runs off it, so no bleed is needed. Trim to the card.
5. Do print one proof and scan it with two phones, one iPhone and one Android, from about thirty centimetres. It should open in under two seconds, on the address above.

Agentec, WERC APAC Bengaluru, Friday 18 September 2026, session 7 at 14:00. One code for the whole room, and every delegate who scans it gets their own agent.
